

The Life of a Matyó Vagabond

The Life of a Matyó Vagabond

by István Kovács

✘ After the Hungarian Revolution of 1956, engineer István Kovács, escaping from punishment, moved to Australia. He became a successful designer of motorbikes who finally became a head manager of General Motors in Melbourne. Although he is settled down in Australia, he has been visiting Matyóland for decades. He is a tree-lover, who wants to make the Earth a better place by planting trees on both spheres.

His generosity, commitment and patriotism serve as a fine example for all of us to follow.
